About the Show. Breast cancer is more than the pink ribbon that symbolizes the disease; it is not pink nor is it pretty. It can be a messy, devastating, life-altering, and lonely journey. The women and men represented by the pink ribbon may have the same disease, but everyone's story is different. Behind the Pink Ribbon is a weekly podcast dedicated to sharing the stories of breast cancer survivors to uncover the reality of what lies behind the pink ribbon.

The pink ribbon works. Breast cancer has high awareness, gets lots of attention and (generally) a lot of funding. All of which I think are excellent things for people like us. I'm not telling you to buy all merchandise with pink ribbons on it. But I am saying this. The pink ribbon is good, stop being a hater. Think pink ☺

It's a crusade that should unite all of us at every level. That pink ribbon, after all, is just the pretty tie that sits atop the box in which the gift of life has been wrapped, and where the hope of a cure has been waiting to be released/to become the perfect gift for each of us who knows cancer all too well. www.BreastCancerSpeaker.com

Over time, that light can become increasingly brighter until, eventually, it can illuminate your life in a wholly new way. The Pink Ribbon Path is a path of light born of darkness, finding its catalyst in illness but finding its expression in a life of renewed joy, wholeness and purpose. Illness does not have to define us. We can be ill, yet whole.
